Benjamin G. Del Vecchio Music Director and Conductor

Benjamin G. Del Vecchio was born in Boston, Massachusetts, the grandson of Italian immigrants. Del Vecchio received his Bachelor's and Master's Degrees from New England Conservatory of Music and did doctoral work at Indiana University in Bloomington.

Most of his career has consisted of creating or building music programs. At Taylor University, he built a fifty-five piece orchestra from an initial group of five instrumentalists. From there he became founder of the Marion Philharmonic and Kokomo Symphony, as well as conducting the Owensboro (Kentucky) Youth Orchestra.

The Eighties found him in Indianapolis, conducting both the Carmel Symphony and Indianapolis Philharmonic Orchestra. A part-time position as choir director at St. Alphonsus Church in Zionsville led to twenty-five years conducting various choral groups in this area. In 2007, he teamed up with members of this community to actualize the concept of a west-suburban chorus and orchestra.
